“ Allen could not have been a better big brother. One day when I was nine and in 4th Grade, a kid much bigger than I, but in the same grade, jumped me on the playground. I don't remember my antagonist's first name, but his last name was as big as he was, Kuykendahl. Allen and Coston, my cousin, were not let me going to take a beating from a big guy, so they came to my rescue and pulled him off me and dragged him away. They lectured him, but could not do much more since Kuykendahl was the son of the School District Superintendent. I always think of that when I think of Allen.
